PROPOSED STATISHEST FOR MUSE PONCIOS APPAIRS CONSULTES

as Chairman of the ABC and now as Birector of Central Intelligence, I have maintained a keep interest in disarrament matters and in the Arms Control and Disarrament Agency. The intelligence community, including CIA, cooperates extensively with the ACBA in carrying out their disarrament research. Contributions have been made by various Agencies, for example, in the area of nuclear test detection in support of the Department of Beforese VELA programs.

The CIA has no current research programs specifically directed at disarrament, although such of its normal research, both in Foreign military and economic programs and in intelligence collection techniques and equipment, is applicable. The Agency supplies the results of such research to ACDA, and ACDA is a recipient of many of our finished intelligence reports and estimates. In the past we have conducted specific requested studies for ACDA and no doubt will do more in the future. On occasion we have also participated in ACDA-spensored functs studying nuclear arms control proposals.
